"How did they come to desert?"

The boys had a short furiough on shore, and they did not come back, that is all. They were on three ships—the Portsmouth, the Saratoga, and the Constitution, and they had separately decided to leave when they got a chance without conspiring together at all. Nobody complains against Commodore Lewis of the New Hampshire. He was a regular father to us all. But we who were on a cruise off the const of Maine on the Portsmouth last summer had a tough time of it under Capt. Faunt and Lieut. Scifridge. At anchor off one of the ports in Maine the Captain had some high-toned vislitors, and when they came to see us and asked who we were, he said. Oh, they're wharf rals, and at another time he called us 'beggars' and 'thieves.' At Portsmouth four of us broke our liberty and siayed twelve hours over time; some others who were refused permission to go ashore jumped off and stayed as long as they pleased. All these were runished just alike, We had to take two hours on and two off all night on deek, and it was freezing cold. Almost all of the officers like to show their authority before us, and we are ordered about as though would be en-ouraged, but we've only the position of a warrant officer to look forward to as the vory best thing to be obtained, and to be a bontswain or a sail maker is not the most wonderful thing in the world to alive boy."

"Well, you knew about what you were undertaking when you shipped, did you not?"

"No, we didn't, sir," broke in one of the boys.

There is the yacht Wave, which sails up the fluston or some other rivor, drops anchor, and lies there for boys to admire her. Then the officers talk so eweely about some of us coming some day to be a commander o

Grievances of the Boys who are Training for Sailors in the Navy.

On Thursday last seventy-five boys, training for sailors in the United States navy. were transferred from the naval training squadron at Newport to the Tennessee, now high and dry on a dry dook in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Many of the boys were companions of the thirty lads who have deserted from the flagship New Hampshire of the training squadron at Newport in the last lew days. The officer in charge of the Tennessee readily permitted a Sun reporter to see the boys alone, and twenty brighteyed and intelligent lads in the uniforms of the training school gathered around the reporter between decks.

"Were there any New York boys among the deserters?" was the first question. A black-cyed boy replied:

"I knew a good many of 'em, sir. There were Henry W. Eagles, Max Beck, Herbert A. Stryker, James A. McGinley, James F. Cady, Daniel J. Folsy, Gustav E. Maschke, Whillam H. McMellon, Bernard J. McKenn, and Arthur Van Ette." Other boys knew Stephen H. Miller of Careyyille, N. Y.; William Spener of ans who were unwilling to commit their inter-ests to the control of the colored man; and, in order to get rid of the negro at the polls, they had disfranchised the white men and the women alike. The movement now was a parti-san one, not designed to advance the cause of real suffrage, but intended to be utilized, like Mahoneism in Virginia and repudiation else-where.

The Senate Committee on Finance this morning, by a majority vote, decided to recommend for passage, without amendment, the bill recently introduced by Senator Morrill, providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the question of the tariff and internal revenue laws. The bill provides for the appointment of nine Commissioners from civil life by the President, sunbject to confirmation by the Senate. They are to thoroughly investigate all the various questions relating to the agricultural, commercial, mercantile, manufacturing, mining, and industrial interests of the United States, so far as may be necessary to the establishment of a judicious tariff or a revision of the existing tariff and the existing system of internal revenue laws, upon a scale of justice to all interests. The Commission may visit different portions of the country, and it is to report to Congress the results of its investigation and the testimeny taken from time to time. It must make its final report not later than the first Monday in January, 1883.

Senator Miller of New York introduced a bili to prevent the adulteration of food or drugs. It forbids, under a penalty of $50 for each offence, the importation, sale, or barter of any adulterated article of food or drugs within the United States. It prohibits the passage of any such article through the Castom House. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to select from names submitted to him by the National Board of Health suitably qualified persons to act as public analysts at ports of entry in the examination of specimens of food and drugs believed by customs officers to be adulterated.
